5. article 6, paragraph 2, second indent of Directive (EU) 2015/1535

6. On 1st July 2024, the Latvian Government notified, as part of the TRIS 2015/1535 notification procedure, the draft law "Amendments to the Handling of Alcoholic Beverages Law" (TRIS 2024/0351/LV).

The proposal introduces amendments to the current law on the production of alcoholic beverages, which regulates all activities related to alcoholic beverages, including production, packaging, labelling, import, export, distribution, marketing and retailing on trains, aircraft and ships registered in Latvia.

In particular, the Latvian technical standard on alcoholic beverages introduces the obligation to:

- 1) 'additional' labelling of the nutritional declaration (which may be limited to calories) and the list of ingredients, provided on the label of the product or made available by electronic means, with the location of the nutritional declaration and the list of ingredients for all alcoholic beverages;
- 2) the indication on the label of a "graphic symbol and other visual elements (e.g. borderlines, background drawing, or colour) serving as a warning against the consumption of alcoholic beverages during pregnancy and while operating a vehicle."

It is also introduced:

- the obligation to display a sign at points of sale warning that the consumption of alcoholic beverages has adverse effects on health and that alcoholic beverages cannot be sold to minors [note that this obligation already exists for advertising and online sales of alcohol];
- the prohibition of promotional activities for alcohol in points of sale (including online), for example by offering more units of products involving a unit price lower than the price that would have been paid for the purchase of a single unit separately, or as "2 for 1 offer";
- the prohibition of advertising of "alcoholic beverage prices and discounts" in publications, printed advertising material, cinemas, online support, postal services, and points of sale (with the exception of the production site and premises of the producer) [note that alcohol advertising is already quite restrictively regulated in Latvia]

The Decree notified by Latvia provides that these measures will enter into force on 1st June 2025, with the exception of those on labelling which will enter into force on 1st January 2028 (with an unlimited stock exhaustion clause for products "processed and labelled" before that date).

While Italy has always supported the need to encourage responsible consumption of alcohol, it should be noted that the Latvian draft law risks undermining the harmonisation of legislation at the European level and creating a barrier to the free movement of goods.

It should be noted that, for wine and aromatised wine products, in accordance with Article 119 of Regulation (EU) No 1308/2013, as amended by Regulation (EU) 2021/2117, the nutritional declaration and the list of ingredients are already mandatory indications. The aforementioned European legislation therefore certainly takes precedence over the draft law notified by Latvia, in particular as regards both the possibility of providing the aforementioned mandatory information via the digital label and the way in which it is presented (Delegated Regulations (EU) 2023/1606 and (EU) 2024/585 laid down, respectively, rules on the designation of ingredients for wines and aromatised wine products).

The measure notified by Latvia therefore risks introducing new labelling requirements that would force producers and importers to change labels specifically for the Latvian market, thus creating barriers to trade and hampering the smooth functioning of the single market. The provision in question, by not providing for the "mutual recognition clause", could constitute an obstacle to the free movement of goods and a measure equivalent to a quantitative restriction, prohibited by Article 34 TFEU.

It is recalled in this regard that, according to the principle of mutual recognition, Member States may not prohibit the placing on their market of a product for which there is no harmonised legislation and which has already been lawfully marketed in another Member State, or which originates in Turkey or an EEA country and is lawfully marketed in those countries. The main purpose of the Mutual Recognition Regulation is precisely to establish a procedural framework to minimise the risk that national technical rules create unlawful obstacles to the free movement of goods between Member States.

It should also be noted, as observed by the European Commission in its “observations” on Latvia’s draft technical regulation, that according to the Court of Justice, C-376/22, a Member State cannot impose general and abstract obligations on the provider of a communication platform established in another Member State. Such a national approach is contrary to Union law, which guarantees the free movement of information society services through the principle of control in the Member State of origin of the service concerned.

According to the findings of the Communications Guarantee Authority, the draft technical regulation under examination does not appear to be consistent with Regulation (EU) 2022/2065 on intermediation services either. With this regulation, the European legislator intended, in fact, that “in order to safeguard and improve the functioning of the internal market, a targeted set of uniform, effective and proportionate mandatory rules should be established at Union level. This Regulation provides the conditions for innovative digital services to emerge and to scale up in the internal market. The approximation of national regulatory measures at Union level concerning the requirements for providers of intermediary services is necessary to avoid and put an end to fragmentation of the internal market and to ensure legal certainty, thus reducing uncertainty for developers and fostering interoperability.” Article 2 specifically states that “this Regulation shall apply to intermediary services offered to recipients of the service that have their place of establishment or are located in the Union, irrespective of where the providers of those intermediary services have their place of establishment.”

In other words, the Intermediated Services Regulation seeks to establish uniform rules, applicable to all service providers offering services in the European Union irrespective of the country of establishment of the providers of those intermediary services, in order to ensure that the movement of goods and services within the European Union is not hindered by different rules.

The notified Latvian draft, in so far as it imposes specific obligations on service providers offering services on Latvian territory, appears not to be in line with European Regulation 2022/2065, given that the regulation seeks, on the contrary, to create a single digital space with uniform rules applicable to all service providers offering services in the European Union.

In light of the problems identified, with reference to the notification referred to above, it is proposed to issue a detailed opinion, as it is considered that the draft could create barriers to the free movement of goods in the internal market.
