a container volume (up to a maximum of 3 120 litres per year for businesses) depending on the amount of residual waste they produce. Charges and levies are payable for the services provided by municipalities (collection, handling and treatment of residual waste).

9. The aim is to standardise the handling and treatment of residual waste regardless of the place at which it is produced. This will also bring about an alignment with the regulations applicable in the majority of other federal provinces. Through this, municipalities are able to benefit from synergies in the handling and treatment of the entire residual waste produced in their municipal areas. The aim is also to optimise waste transport, predominantly with the objective of reducing emissions (particularly via the increased use of rail transport, as is already taking place to a certain extent), combined with a further optimisation of capacity utilisation at the treatment plants in Lower Austria. This requirement is necessary in order to achieve the stated objectives. It is also proportionate, particularly because a sufficiently long transitional period is envisaged.

15. All 'non-households' (businesses, institutions and other bodies) which have not yet participated in the municipal collection and handling of their residual waste must adapt their waste disposal systems. A transitional period until the end of 2018 is envisaged. During this period, the municipalities must also establish the necessary administrative procedures and provide the refuse containers.

16. TBT aspect

No - the draft has no significant impact on international trade.

SPS aspect

No - the draft has no significant impact on international trade.

No - the draft is neither a sanitary nor phytosanitary measure.
